Team goal picks — weekend of Saturday 17 and Sunday 18 October 2026

Requested date was 17/10/2025. That date is already past (today is 16 Oct 2026) and the sources only hold upcoming fixtures, so this sheet covers the 17/10/2026 weekend. Picks: 50 in total. Over-2 side: 5 (each at least 51%). Below-3 side: 45 (each at least 93%). Doubtful teams were left out.

How to read it: left column = teams the model expects to score 3 or more goals at full time; right column = teams expected to finish with 0, 1 or 2 goals. Probability is the model's chance the statement is true for that team's full-time goals. It is an estimate, not a guarantee.

Expected hits if the model is right: about 45.3 of 50 (over side 2.9 of 5; below side 42.5 of 45). Treat these as upper-bound estimates: a Poisson model underweights blow-outs and surprise scorers, so real hit rates on the over side are likely lower than the figures shown.

Why the over side has few picks: no team in these leagues has more than a 64% chance of scoring 3 or more on this model. The next candidates are around 40-46% and were left out on purpose. The below-3 side is more reliable because most teams are unlikely to reach 3 goals.

Method and sources: expected goals from each match's 1X2 probabilities (Sports4Cast ML predictions for the other leagues; MatchSharp market-implied odds and Opta for the top five leagues, with news adjustments from the first report). Each team's full-time goals are modelled as independent Poisson. Full data, sources and factors are in football-analysis/. Not betting advice. Gamble only what you can afford to lose.
